The Resolutions.

The women of Salt Lake city and county, in mass meeting assembled, hereby adopt the following resolutions: Whereas: A convention is being held in this city for the purpose of framing a convention for the purpose.

Wheras, It is conceded alike by the Wheras, it is conceded alize by the advocates and the opponents of woman suffrage that in all intellectual attributes and attainments the women are entitled to vote, and, if this be true, then they posses the necessary intelligence and attainments to enable them to determine for themselves whether they desire this privilege, and they should be given the opportunity to decide this question for themselves; and

Whereas From the published state-mments of a majority of the delegates of the convention it appears that they are supporting the proposition of equal suffrage, not from personal preference or conviction that it is right, but be-cause they feel obliged to do so from the fact that they have been elected upon platforms favoring woman suf-frage; and

Wheras, it would be better to remain disfranchised than to have the privi-lege extended to us through compul-

The women of this city who are opposed to having the equal suffrage chause inserted in the constitution, and who favor the submission of a separate article, fired the first gun in their campaign at the Grand operahouse yesterday afternoon, and followed it up with enother at the exposition building last evening.

The meeting at the opera house brought out a great audience, composed almost exclusively of women and those who expected a long drawn our wrangle were agreeably supprised. In responding he said the ladies present would never know how grateful he felt that this mass meeting had been called. He was of the opinion that removing from our common vocabulary of the name of diety was a wise provision. It was done in order that the power and influence of his name might operate for our good and its sacredness preserved. The influence of woman must also be held sacred, and it could not be so kept if she was dragged into the arena of pointics. If there was one thing for the gathering was about the worst in the figure of the gathering was about the worst in the figure and enthusiastic house. If there was one thing more than another that a manly man prided himself upon it was the womanhood of the land. Their opposition to conferring upon her the suffrage was due, in his opinion, to the fact that he had a higher respect for her than did those who wished to drag her into the arena of political life. The question, however, was simply as to whether the matter should be incorporated into the constitution or submitted to a free and soverign people as a separate article, in order that it might be considered upon its merits independent of all else. If it should be incorporated in the constitution it would place a large number of people in a peculiar position. Those who insisted upon having it in the constitution claimed that the people were overwhelmingly in the constitution claimed that the people were overwhelmingly and the constitution claimed that the people were overwhelmingly in the constitution claimed that the people were overwhelmingly and the constitution claimed that the people were overwhelmingly and although the piane selected sang "Alice where Art Thou?" as an encore, sang "Alice where Art Thou?" as an encore.

If the position of those persons was correct the article would be accepted by an overwhelming vote. If, as he believed, the people were opposed to it, then to incorporate the provision in the constitution would be to force these opposed to equal suff-rage to stuitlify themselves and vote for it, or else vote against the constitution and thus vote against statehood. Mrs. C. I. Kirby.

The next speaker was Mrs. C. I. Kirby, who said that she most heartly endorsed the resolutions, but at the same time, she wished it understood that she was most emphatically in favor of equal suffrage. She did not agree with Mr. Roberts that suffrage would drag woman down in any certical suffrage would drag woman down in any certical suffrage whatever, but she did not think it should be forced upon them in the manner proposed by the convention. She believed the women should neet and consider the matter, as they were the ones who would be iffected, and they ought to be consulted. She told of the experience when women did have suffrage here, and said that she never voted a straight ticket.

The Resolutions Adopted. There being no further peakers, the question on the adoption of the resolution was put. On first vote, there was quite a chorus of noes, but when a rising vote was called for the resolutions were adopted, there being but three or four dissenting votes.

The meeting then adjourned.

A False Diagnosis.

La Grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages, and in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

He hoped this meeting would give emphatic expression on the resolutions aubmitted, and yet he feared that while this meeting was being held the woman's suffrage clause might be incorporated into the constitution by the convention. It was more important therefore, that he be in his place to record his vote against the measure, than that he continue to address this meeting. Wishing them God speed in their efforts, he would therefore retire.

Mrs. Froiseth

Mrs. Froiseth read a somewhat lengthy address, favoring the resolutions on the ground that the insertion of the equal suffrage clause in the constitution clause would be likely to defeat statehood.

I personally expected that, and what surprised me most was that the minority was as large as it proved to be. The people of Utah are not all of one mind in this matter, and not-withstanding the majority of the convention has concluded to close its ears to the murmured tones of the pople these murmurs will gradually grow until they gair the proportions of peals of thunder which will make themselves heard in no uncertain voice.

Don't Dash Away the Golden Chalice
Judge Powers followed Mr. Roberts, and said that notwithstanding the action of the convention the people assembled can at least make known their dissatisfaction with the majority of the constitutional assembly who have shown that they consider the melves the people's

Jake Greenwald here offered a resolution calling on the constitutional convention to submit the question of suffrage a a separate article and begging the convention not to turn a deaf ear to the voice of the people.

This was adopted unantmously with a whoop.

Judge Colborn wished to thank Mr.
Roberts for the gallant stand he had taken. If he has been digging his political grave for the last two weeks, said the judge, there will be more mour lers at that grave than celebrants at the marriagleast of the present majority.

There are people unalterably opposed to woman suffrage, and the whole people should have an opportunity of expressing their views on the matter.

He Was and He Wasn't. J. N. Kimball said he was in favor of submitting it to the people. He had voted to put it in the constitution because of purty pledges, which bound him to support suffrage in some form or another. He would, however, vote for a reconsideration and would stand by Mr. Roberts from this on.

Roberts Stands Alone.

The chairman asked for an expression from the audience as to those who would vote against the constitution if woman suffrage was incorporated in the document. All pledged themselves to vote against it except Mr. Roberts, who alone and very distinctly said "No." and in explanation afterwards said he would vote for the constitution even if it contained a suffrage clause, as he preferred statehood with woman suffrage to no statehood without it.
